The University of Tokyo invites applications for the following two undergraduate degree programs called

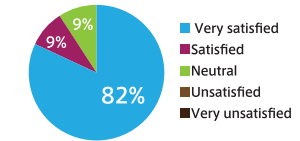

PEAK (Programs in English at Komaba):

- International Program on Japan in East Asia
- International Program on Environmental Sciences

PEAK welcomes people who aspire to be young leaders with extensive knowledge in various fields as well as communication and problem-solving skills. PEAK is a Bachelor of Arts program based on the traditional liberal arts curriculum treasured by the University. No prior knowledge of Japanese is required, but compulsory Japanese language courses are included in the curriculum.

"It's very good that people related to PEAK care about us so much."

91% of the current PEAK students say they are satisfied with our student services.

Japan in East Asia

PEAK presented me with a unique opportunity to make bold and positive changes in my life. Studying in Japan for four years at a world-class university would take me in thrilling directions I had never considered before, and would provide me with chances that would have otherwise passed me by. PEAK has given me a deeply rounded understanding of how the world works.

Study here is intense in both range and depth, but all the professors are very accessible and willing to help us with academic and non-academic problems. There are plenty of choices for extracurricular activities available to us and I have joined the Aikido Club. Getting involved in PEAK activities and other student events makes my campus life busy but also more colorful.
