Vice-Chancellor, Monash University

Leading Monash to a brilliant future

Monash is Australia's largest university and home to a world-class education and research community spanning four continents – a community where outstanding students and researchers are nurtured and thrive.

The University now seeks to appoint a new Vice-Chancellor to build on the momentum generated by Vice-Chancellor Professor Ed Byrne.

Ranked among the world's top 100 universities, Monash is the youngest member of the Group of Eight, the coalition of Australia's most prestigious research-intensive universities. The University is seeking an exceptional leader who can build on Monash's existing success to inspire and guide Monash to become one of the best universities in the Asia-Pacific region, one of the strongest research universities in the world and a truly global university both physically and intellectually.

A visionary and strategic leader of the highest calibre, the successful candidate will be bold in thinking and creative in spirit – one who will have the exceptional ability and profile demanded for the role of steering a large-scale and complex research-intensive university, constantly determined to achieve excellence and to make a difference to the world.

Initial enquiries or application may be directed in confidence to search firm Perrett Laver via email to monash@perrettlaver.com or to either:

Shape our horizon

Vice-Chancellor

FOUNDED IN 1921, the University of Leicester is a leading UK University committed to international excellence through the creation of world-changing research and high quality, inspirational teaching within an inclusive, academic culture. Citation levels for research place the University amongst the top 1% of universities in the world and Leicester is ranked consistently in the UK top 20 overall, and is regularly highly ranked for student satisfaction in the UK National Student Survey. With 23,000 students, 3,400 staff and an annual turnover of £278 million, the University generates £700 million to the regional economy.

We now wish to appoint a Vice-Chancellor to succeed Professor Sir Robert Burgess when he steps down in September 2014 after fifteen years of successful and dedicated service. Ensuring that the University maintains and enhances its performance in a rapidly evolving external environment, our new Vice-Chancellor will develop an ambitious strategic plan for the institution and provide the dynamic leadership required to shape and implement our aspirational future.

Building on Leicester's significant achievements of recent years, we are seeking an exceptional academic and creative leader who will take advantage of the new and exciting opportunities presented to us. By encouraging the development of further collaborative partnerships with organisations worldwide, he or she will help emphasise Leicester's reputation as a prominent, global university committed to ground-breaking, interdisciplinary research and inspirational teaching.

The successful applicant will join an institution which is passionate about its work, that believes in the synergy between research and teaching and which engenders a vibrant, tolerant and accessible intellectual community without compromise.
