Dairy Genetics & Nutrition Opportunities

SRUC (Scotland's Rural College) wishes to expand its activities in dairy teaching, research, and consultancy - supporting new initiatives both in the UK and internationally as part of the Edinburgh node of the Centre for Tropical Livestock Genetics and Health (CTLGH) a Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation funded initiative. To support this initiative, new roles have been created.

Professor (or Reader) in Global Dairy Systems – Dumfries:

To ensure SRUC provides opportunities to project UK dairy science internationally – both through promoting Agritech solutions in developed countries and innovating to support dairy systems in developing countries.

Professor (or Reader) in Dairy Nutrition – Dumfries:

To ensure precision livestock farming underpins the development of new approaches to dairy nutrition and will complement the expertise in dairy genetics / systems of the Langhill project.

Professor (or Reader) in Tropical Dairy Genetics/Genomics – Edinburgh:

Coordinating activities and leading the implementation of work with the vision of harnessing the genetic potential to increase tropical bovine climatic adaptation and to improve productivity within CTLGH.

Post-doctoral Research Assistant: Tropical Dairy Genetics/Genomics - Edinburgh:

Using computational methods to analyse and develop large genomic datasets, with a focus on tropical livestock genetics and health within CTLGH.

As one of Europe's leading research universities, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität (LMU) in Munich is committed to the highest international standards of excellence in research and teaching. Building on its more than 500-year-long tradition, it offers a broad spectrum that covers all areas of knowledge within its 18 Faculties, ranging from the humanities, law, economics and social sciences, to medicine and the natural sciences.

The Faculty of Languages and Literatures invites applications for a

Junior Professorship (W1)
(for a period of 3 years)
of Slavic Literatures and Media

commencing on 1 April 2019.

The applicant will be expected to teach and conduct research in the field of Slavic Literature; specialization in at least one Slavic language is required. The candidate should furthermore demonstrate a proven record of research in media studies in at least one Slavic culture based on publications, teaching experience, or scholarly presentations.

Prerequisites for this position are a university degree, teaching skills at university level and an aptitude for an academic career, usually evidenced by the excellent quality of a doctoral degree in the field of Slavic Literature. If the applicant was employed as a research assistant either before or after obtaining the doctoral degree, the entire duration of the period of employment and of the doctoral degree should not exceed six years.

The position is a fixed-term professorship for the duration of three years. Pending a positive evaluation, the position may be extended by another period of three years. A conversion to an indefinite position (tenure track) is not possible.

LMU Munich makes a point of providing newly appointed professors with various types of support, such as welcoming services and assistance for dual career couples.

LMU Munich is an equal opportunity employer. The University continues to be very successful in increasing the number of female faculty members and strongly encourages applications from female candidates. LMU Munich intends to enhance the diversity of its faculty members. Furthermore, disabled candidates with essentially equal qualifications will be given preference.

Please submit your application comprising a curriculum vitae, documentation of academic degrees and certificates as well as a list of publications and teaching to the Dean of the Faculty of Languages and Literatures, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München, Geschwister-Scholl-Platz 1, 80539 Munich, Germany, no later than 7 December 2018.
