THE

HEAD OF COMMUNICATIONS - TIMES HIGHER EDUCATION

Times Higher Education are excited to announce they are looking to recruit an ambitious and innovative Head of Communications, reporting to the Chief Knowledge Officer, to lead this area of the corporate portfolio.

The successful candidate will be joining a senior management team that has achieved unprecedented global growth over the past two years. THE's management team are challenged to further develop their work helping universities to improve their performance, as well as attract students, recruit academic talent and secure funding. This growth will include a focus on enhancing the company's digital offering and continuing the expansion into new international markets.

Positioned at the heart of the senior management team, this essential role will work with departments across the business, developing an inclusive corporate communications strategy that identifies opportunities to drive coverage that promotes the business both internally and externally and protects the global THE brand.

This opportunity will have a global remit with the successful candidate looking to develop THE communications and brand presence in numerous overseas territories.

*Further information can be discussed with our Recruitment Partners, Dixon Walter Ltd.
