Dean of the School of Engineering

Salary negotiable

The University of Liverpool is ranked in the top 1% of higher education institutions in the world, it is an institution with global reach whose activities are rooted in research and teaching excellence and reflect the dynamics of the knowledge economy. The School of Engineering has world-leading research conducted through its two departments (Civil Engineering & Industrial Design and Mechanical, Materials & Aerospace Engineering). Teaching-related activities within the School have many outstanding features and are bolstered by state-of-the-art, active teaching labs and extensive outreach activities. The School has been awarded Athena Swan Bronze and is ambitious to attain a Silver, and ultimately, a Gold Award.

The University is now looking to appoint a Dean of the School of Engineering. The Dean will be an individual who is an exceptional academic leader, able to drive the School forward and be responsible for the delivery of local plans in support of the University's strategic plan (Strategy 2026). They will have an outstanding academic track record, demonstrating research excellence and leadership and the potential to drive forward the research agenda of the School. They will ensure the delivery of an outstanding modern curriculum to over 1,500 students across the School's engineering disciplines that meet the stated educational aims of The University and the discipline specific accreditation bodies. The appointee will possess proven experience in academic leadership, possibly from leading a significant research activity, in the formulation and delivery of the strategy.

The Dean will take responsibility for strategic development within the School, leading the School's Management Team in identifying future collaborative inter-disciplinary research and impact opportunities, maintaining and building strategic partnerships with business and developing innovations in scholarship that will enhance our students' experience. The Dean will also be a member of the Faculty's senior management team and will play a part in shaping and delivering the Faculty's overall strategy.

SPAIS – The School of Sociology, Politics and International Studies

The University of Bristol's Faculty of Social Sciences and Law is supporting a major investment in posts in the fields of Politics and International Relations. The posts are based in the School of Sociology, Politics and International Studies (SPAIS).

We are planning on appointing several outstanding individuals at the level of Lecturer/Senior Lecturer and Reader/Professor.

- Reader/Professor in Politics and International Relations (any sub-discipline, including Gender).
- Lecturer/Senior Lecturer in Politics or International Relations (any sub-discipline, including British politics, International Security, International Political Economy, and International Development).

Successful candidates will join a highly collegial and thriving interdisciplinary School, which has a vibrant research culture and extremely successful teaching programmes. The School is based in a successful and expanding Faculty and a world-class University. The School's existing expertise in Politics and International Relations includes gender and politics/IR; critical security studies; international development, European politics, British politics and political theory. The School participates actively in many of the interdisciplinary initiatives within the University of Bristol, including the Cabot Institute (with expertise in environment and sustainability); the Brigstow Institute (fostering co-produced interdisciplinary research); the Bristol Institute for Migration and Mobility Studies. There are also opportunities for future research collaboration within the University's planned Temple Quarter Enterprise Campus which will host new Institutes on civic and digital futures.

To apply for these roles please complete the University's online application and submit together with a covering letter and CV at www.bristol.ac.uk/jobs. For more detailed information on the specific vacancies simply enter the vacancy number ACAD103639 (Reader/Professor) or ACAD103672 (Lecturer/Senior Lecturer) in the online search facility. Closing date for applications is midnight on Tuesday 8th January 2019.

We appreciate and value difference, seeking to attract, develop and retain a diverse mix of talented people that will contribute to the overall success of Bristol and help maintain our position as one of the world's leading universities.
