The University of Macau is a comprehensive university with a high degree of internationalisation. Its predecessor was the University of East Asia, established in 1951. UEA was acquired by the local government in 1968 and renamed University of Macau in 1991, becoming the only public comprehensive university in Macau. It currently offers approximately 130 degree programs, including bachelor’s programs, master’s programs, PhD programs, and other programs, through the Faculty of Arts and Humanities, Faculty of Business Administration, Faculty of Education, Faculty of Health Sciences, Faculty of Law, Faculty of Social Sciences, Faculty of Science and Technology, Institute of Chinese Medical Sciences, Institute of Applied Physics and Materials Engineering, and Honors College. English is the main medium of instruction. UM has an outstanding faculty team comprised of internationally recruited scholars with rich teaching experience and impressive academic backgrounds, many of whom graduated from well-known universities. It now ranks among the top in Asia in terms of the diversity of the faculty body.

UM has implemented Asia’s largest residential college system. It also adopts an innovative model of education, which consists of discipline-specific education, general education, research and internships education, and community and peer education, in an effort to create graduates with leadership skills, learn spirit, integrity, and a sense of social responsibility. In the future, UM will constantly enhance its teaching and research, increase its degree of internationalisation, and launch more academic programmes, in order to achieve the goal of being a high-quality first-class university with regional characteristics.
