Erasmus University Rotterdam is ranked number 95 worldwide in graduate employability. In the Netherlands you can't expect to be handed a job with your diploma, but there are lots of tools to help you on your way. Graduates are eligible for a one-year work permit for the Netherlands, the Dutch 'orientation year,' an opportunity to further develop international experience and connections. Some faculties offer placement services and all students can make use of basic workshops and trainings offered by our on-campus career services office.

Our city is our laboratory: welcome to urban, ever-changing Rotterdam

With its huge port, famously multicultural population, and many multinational companies, Rotterdam – the Netherlands' second biggest city – is an environment full of cases, data and partners for research. Thanks to its international train station and local airport, Rotterdam is also an excellent base for exploring Europe. English is an unofficial second language here and nearly everyone you meet will love to speak English with you, even off-campus.

Our main campus is located in the east of Rotterdam, while the medical centre is right in the city centre and our development studies programme is based nearby in the Hague, 'the international capital of peace and justice'. You can count on safe and convenient metros, trams, buses, and trains to get around, but you'll find that students most often make their way by bike.

	International student housing

Working with the city to optimise health: Generation R

At our medical centre, Erasmus MC, researchers lead a long-term study that captures information about children from fetal life until young adulthood in the multi-ethnic urban population of Rotterdam. The study includes the largest detailed database of scanned children in the world, providing unique insight into how to optimise the health of a population anywhere around the globe.

"Studying Human Resource Management at Erasmus University gave me the academic skills needed to initiate my career as a consultant and helped me develop the right mindset to work effectively in an international organisation."

Highly reasonable tuition & one-year programmes

Dutch higher education offers incredible value; programmes for the 2018–2019 academic year will cost roughly €2,000 for European Union (EU)/European Economic Area (EEA) students. For students from other parts of the world tuition depends on your programme, and starts at €4,000. Cost of living is very reasonable in Rotterdam compared to other major European cities such as Amsterdam or Paris.

The majority of our master programmes take one year. However, there are some part-time opportunities or variations – such as research masters for those who wish to continue to a PhD and executive programmes for professionals – that take up to two years.

Though the Netherlands does not have a wide tradition of scholarships, there are some wonderful country-, university-, and faculty-specific aid options that may be relevant for you. Find information about financing your master on eur.nl/finances.

For more information about scholarships and grants for studying in the Netherlands, please visit grantfinder.nl.

From master to PhD researcher

Each year more than 300 academics complete their PhD at Erasmus University Rotterdam. All faculties have their own doctorate programme, normally a four-year track during which you perform research on a particular subject under the supervision of a professor.

Completing a PhD is a requirement for becoming a university professor, researcher, or scientist in many fields. In the course of your PhD you will follow courses and workshops, and attend conferences, all geared towards enhancing your research and networking skills.

The Netherlands is known for its relatively flexible, or 'flat', management culture. This is reflected in the PhD environment as well, where candidates are considered fellow researchers and treated as colleagues rather than students. Positions for internal PhD candidates (with full employment status) are announced on the university's website and/or on academictransfer.com.

"I like the idea that my research can really contribute to a more sustainable and resilient society."

Katharina Hölscher

PhD candidate

Katharina researches how societal change towards sustainability and resilience can be realised in long-term climate governance and translates her insights into policy practice.
